

We enjoy leaving in Indiana with one of the strongest do-not call laws on the books. Since this went into effect we can eat and enjoy ourselves in our home without having to be bothered by annoying phone calls. Please do not let groups like The Consumer Bankers Association (CBA) try to get around our current law by making us suffer with the weaker one that the other states have to use. If we must suffer with the national do not call law then you the FCC need to get it at least as strong as the Indiana law or even stronger by adding ones that may not ever call me without my permission. (for example surveys).
